That means forklift drivers need to be aware of their surroundings, and also that employers and building owners need to set safety-focused policies in place for safe operation.Though safety and other factors are important for proper forklift operation, iteĀĀĀs hard to put those things into practice without actually knowing how to work it. Most forklifts have three basic means of control: a steering wheel, a set of pedals and a lever. The steering wheel helps maneuver the machine, while the lever controls the up-and-down motion of the fork. Forklifts usually have three pedals in a set, including an inching pedal, which brakes the machine when pressed down and allows for eĀĀĀinchingĀĀĀ or slow movement when released. The other two pedals are accelerators that move the machine forward or backward.TurningBecause tipping is such a concern with forklift operation, iteĀĀĀs important to be knowledgeable and deliberate when performing turns. Sharp, sudden turns are a bad idea, as are turns of any sort on a grade. You should only turn a forklift on even, flat ground. When you do execute a turn, be sure to anticipate the fact that the back end of the forklift will swing out against the turn. Avoid turning with forks lifted as well.Raising and Lowering the ForkHandling a load with the forks requires its own set of instructions. Loads need to be evenly balanced and maneuvered correctly to avoid spilling or tipping. To raise and lower forks with or without a load, you can use the control lever.TrainingForklifts may seem simple enough to operate, but safe operation requires a lot of knowledge, focus and attention. Though theyeĀĀĀre heavy-duty machines, it can be surprising how easy it is to tip them over and otherwise get into trouble while operating them. With this in mind, the United States Department of LaboreĀĀĀs Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) requires that forklift operators receive proper Employers should make sure that all prospective forklift operators are properly trained and evaluated before theyeĀĀĀĀre allowed to start driving on the job. ItĀĀĀĀs a good idea to keep records of this training in case thereeĀĀĀs an accident. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET
